

Tour Guide System Hire & Sale

Wireless tour guide systems bring clear and intelligible communication to large factory tours, open air tours, multi-language interpretations, audio descriptions and other guided tours in many challenging environments.

Apple Sound tour guide systems offer maximum flexibility with minimum fuss. The system does away with sore throats for tour guides, confusion and frustration for tour groups.

How it works

The system is easily operated without any previous knowledge of the equipment. Once the receivers are distributed to the tour group, the transmitter is switched on and the tour can begin. The lightweight wireless receiver is comfortable to wear, even for long periods.

After use the receivers are simply returned to the storage case for recharging.

The microphone can be hand held or a head-worn type which operates through a belt-worn transmitter - leaving the guide with their hands free to point out interesting features.

The receivers can be either 'stethoset' receivers worn hanging from the ears, or a belt-pack receiver using headphones to relay the sound. Belt pack receivers can also be used in conjunction with 'ear defender' headphones for very noisy environments.

Hire or buy?

Apple Sound offer complete solutions, helping you decide which is the best system to meet your needs. We are not tied to a particular manufacturer so can offer impartial, balanced advice to help you choose the right system.

Buying or renting the system depends on how often you are likely to use it. Many customers start by renting a system on two or three occasions before deciding that purchasing a system outright would be more convenient and financially worthwhile. Similarly, customers who have bought a system to cater for their regular events subsequently hire in further systems for larger events such as open days.

Hire

We hold a large stock of Sennheiser VHF TourGuide systems for hire and can offer up to twelve frequencies for larger multi-group events.

We also stock the new Sennheiser Digital UHF TourGuide System. We can also send an experienced operator along with the equipment to ensure that your crucial open day or other large event goes as smoothly as possible. We hire to many household names throughout the United Kingdom and Europe.

Buy

Apple Sound have been selling tour guide systems for more than twenty years, to many types of industry. With this vast experience we are confident we can offer you the best solution for your particular needs, within your available budget.
